ORIGIN TRIP – GUATEMALA & EL SALVADOR

Mark Barany, of Kuma Coffee, and I recently took an origin trip to Guatemala and El Salvador to visit some of the farms that we are purchasing coffee from this year. And also to meet other producers that we might work with in the future.

Seeing the farms and meeting the producers is an invaluable experience. I personally believe that knowing your food sources is extremely important, and I carry this belief into the coffee business as well. We are passionate about great coffee and we want to work with producers who are passionate about great coffee as well, from the plants to the workers to the cup.

Arturo Agguire, Jr of Finca El Injerto

After our visit, we are especially excited about two farms that we will be working with this year, Finca El Injerto (Guatemala) and Nombre de Dios (El Salvador). I will be putting up a blog over the next couple of weeks about each of these two farms and the producers that operate them. Look for their coffee in late spring/early summer!

EVENT AT CROOKED TREE COFFEEHOUSE

We are very excited to announce that we will have a chance to host Maria Botto and Javier, of Finca Nombre de Dios in El Salvador, on May 2nd. We are putting together an event at the Crooked Tree Coffeehouse with the Botto's. Look for more information on the event within the next few weeks.
